"After years of bitter poverty and bone-crushing abuse, a twelve-year-old girl makes a promise to herself that she will survive at any cost. Growing up near the notorious Korean demilitarized zone (DMZ) in the 1960s and early 1970s, Kyong Mi is left with nothing, and no one. One day, she makes the crucial decision to leave her homeland, never to return. While she gains some measure of comfort and security in the United States under a new identity, the terrors of the past stalk her every move. Can she keep her promise to herself, or will she crumble under the weight of her former life? The woman who once was Kyong Mi will come to realize that her journey to free herself has just begun"--P.
